

Identity Inventory

LAUREN FINE, MD · LAURENFINE.COM

06

"Who are you when you strip away the titles, roles, and expectations?"

This is a present-self inventory — not about where you've been or where you're going, but about who you are right now. Your core values, your genuine strengths, the parts of yourself that have stayed consistent through every change. Most useful at moments of transition, uncertainty, or identity shift.

◆ ROLES VS SELF

List every role you currently hold (professional, family, community). Then answer: which of these is most YOU?

MY ROLES

WHICH FEELS MOST LIKE ME?

◆ STRIPPED DOWN

If you woke up tomorrow with none of your current roles — who would you still be?

--

◆ WHAT HAS STAYED CONSTANT

Across every role, every context, every decade — what has always been true about you?

--

Core Values · Character Strengths

What do you consistently choose, even when it costs you something?

These are your real values — not aspirational ones.

What makes you angry or uncomfortable to witness in others?

Violated values often show up as moral discomfort.

What three words would people from three different chapters of your life use to describe you?

Think: a college friend, a former colleague, a family member. What word would all three use?

What are you doing when you feel most competent and most alive?

Strengths feel effortless. They don't drain you.

What have you built, fixed, or created that you're genuinely proud of?

Not impressive to others — proud of yourself.

Synthesis — Your Identity Statement

MY THREE CORE VALUES — THE ONES I'D NEVER TRADE:

MY THREE GENUINE STRENGTHS — NOT CREDENTIALS, BUT CHARACTER:

WHAT I STAND FOR — IN ONE SENTENCE:

WHO I AM, SEPARATE FROM WHAT I DO:

MY IDENTITY STATEMENT — I AM SOMEONE WHO...:

READY TO GO DEEPER?

Explore your identity with a coach who has navigated this work herself. laurenfine.com

laurenfine.com/coaching · reasondxcoaching@gmail.com