

The Side-Build Map

Test a new direction for 30 days while you still have a paycheck. Small, real, and on the calendar.

Leaving is easier when you are going somewhere. Before you quit anything, find out whether the new direction holds up when you actually do it. This map turns a vague "someday" into four weeks of small experiments.

Start here

The direction I want to test:

The one question this test should answer:

Hours per week I can give it, and what those hours replace:

Four weeks, one step each

Week 1. Talk to three people already doing it. Ask what a normal week looks like, and what they wish they had known.

Who: _____

Week 2. Do a small piece of the actual work. Not a course about it. The work itself, in miniature.

What: _____

Week 3. Offer it to one real person. Free or paid. Real feedback beats imagined feedback.

Who and what: _____

Week 4. Review the evidence. Use the next page.

Read the evidence, not the story

WHAT GAVE ME ENERGY

WHAT DRAINED ME

What did I learn that I could not have learned by thinking about it?

Decide

- ☐ Keep building. Give it the next 30 days and a bigger step.
- ☐ Adjust. The direction is right, the version is wrong. Change one thing.
- ☐ Stop. You did not waste the month. It goes in the compost pile and feeds what grows next.
